

Biography

Patti Wilson

A New York City native, Patti Wilson, is a fashion stylist best known for her instinctive, provocative and visionary style. She is one of the most celebrated and respected stylists today, and is Fashion Editor-at-Large for Vogue Italia.

She always has sparked her creativity by using vivid imagery and raw sexuality. Imbued with her unique imagination and creativity, she has collaborated with the most influential fashion photographers/ directors in the industry, such as Steven Meisel, the late Peter Lindbergh, Steven Klein, Craig McDean, Mert + Marcus, Ryan McGinley and David LaChapelle. Storytelling through fashion is as difficult a process as any in this business and few have been able to make as great of a visual impact as Patti.

Patti continues to collaborate with some of the worlds most influential designers and is recognized for her eclectic taste and continuous capacity to provide her clients and the industry with a fresh perspective on fashion, music and art.

In addition to her role as the Editor-At-Large for Vogue Italia, starting Spring 2021 Patti has been named a Senior Contributing Fashion Editor at Dazed Magazine.